TECHNOLOGY POLICY & ETHICS

IEEE Future Directions considers the reflection of technology through the lens of social implications a key tenant of their work as the Future Directions Initiatives incubate and promote technologies. This bi-monthly eNewsletter in particular highlights the social implications of technology, including but not limited to policy and ethics topics. The articles aim to foster an intellectual exchange of ideas between the world's top subject matter experts, researchers, and practitioners in the areas of future technologies.

HOW TO CONTRIBUTE

Authors are invited to contribute articles on an ongoing basis and receive recognition in the publication. Accepted articles are technically focused and product agnostic with a word count of 800 to 1,200 words. Contact the Managing Editor or visit bit.ly/FDGuidelines for editorial guidelines and submission deadlines.

The Audience: Those interested in ethics and policy in technology, government officials, Standards Developing Organizations (SDOs) and Non-Governmental Organizations (NGOs), Policy decision makers, Technology developers, University researchers, and Industry CTOs.

The Process: Articles are peer reviewed by the IEEE Ethics and Policy in Technology Editorial Board to help ensure trustworthy technology solutions and best practices and to successfully address fundamentally new technology policy challenges.

Join the Editorial Board

Editors are also welcome. The Editorial Board performs the following functions:

- Attend Editorial Board meetings
- Help define the editorial calendar, including special editions and topical interest areas
- Manage the queue of available articles
- Conduct cursory peer review
- Solicit or write articles
- Edit and proofread written articles
